

COCARDE Science Meeting Grants – Guidelines for applicants

ESF-funded COCARDE grants support the active participation of early stage researchers to conferences, workshops and field seminars on issues related to carbonate mounds. Young scientists are awarded through an open competitive call. Selection is performed by the COCARDE-ERN Steering Committee in consultation with the meeting conveners, who will evaluate the scientific quality of the proposals on the basis of strategic considerations and the spirit of the European Science Foundation guidelines.

Eligibility criteria and priority order of grant allocation

Applicants may be either at the pre- or post-doctoral level. The Evaluation Committee (composed of the Steering Committee members of the COCARDE-ESF Research Network Programme and the science meeting organizers), having assessed scientific merit and relevance to the Research Network Programme (RNP), will normally give preference to applications in the following order:

- 1) between contributing ESF member countries;
- 2) between a contributing country and a non-contributing ESF member country;
- 3) between a contributing country and a non-ESF member country in Europe;
- 4) between a contributing country and any country not covered by 1-3.
